

LYCOMING COLLEGE REPORT

Happy Holidays

Had Jesus anticipated and responded to the way we have come to celebrate Christmas centuries later, he surely would have repeated his admonition: "Let the children come to me and do not hinder them, for to such belongs the kingdom of heaven (Mt. 19:14)." Christmas is for children.

Did you ever pretend when you were a child to be on horseback when in fact you were only straddling a stick? The old adage "If wishes were horses, beggars would ride" doesn't discourage children. They wish and presto, they ride! Children understand the magic of Christmas.

One Christmas eve years ago, one of my father's parishioners who operated a five-and-dime invited him to bring my brother and me to his store to pick out whatever we wanted for Christmas. We could select one gift only, but anything in the store was fair game. Although we were not to be prompted, I remember one of the clerks suggested I choose a stick horse. It was fancy--had a stuffed head, glass eyes, and a little wheel on the base. But it had no appeal to me. That wheel on the end was worse than nothing. How could such a wheeled horse kick up the dust and send rocks flying the way my self-respecting mustang does? Wheels on a horse are like buttons on suit sleeves; they may look good, but they are useless!

I try to stay on good terms with that child within me who still rides a stick horse, sending dust and gravel flying across the trails of my imagination. The child in me thrives on surprises and actually looks forward to the unexpected. Such childish wisdom welcomes life as it comes and, consequently, is more reliable than Social Security. A retirement check is not enough to keep one alive to hope.

The child in me also forgets past quarrels and never holds grudges. Playing with others suffices to make them friends. And this child in me is not only ever-ready to play but always manages to find something to play with--a plain old stick will do for those with eyes to see the Broken-Bar brand on the left flank and its flowing mane!

"Let the children come to me and do not hinder them..." Christmas is for children, but that means us. So let's go find a stick and ride off together to see what Christmas is bringing this year!

Lycoming Christmas: party, candlelight service, dinner, TV special Christmas at Lycoming in 1980 means the renewal of several traditional festivities and the birth of a new one.

The traditional Christmas events are the annual Tree-Trimming Party for children, the Candlelight Worship Service in Clarke Chapel, and the All-College Dinner. The new event is a Christmas in Williamsport television special that was to be broadcast live from Clarke Chapel by WNEP-TV in Avoca (near Wilkes-Barre).

One of the highlights of the Dec. 7 children's party, photos of which appear in this issue, was the arrival of Santa Claus in a one-horse open sleigh and rides he gave around the campus quadrangle.

Other activities included trimming of an eight-foot spruce tree with decorations made by the children with the help of Santa's elves, played by students; a rendition of "The Story of Babar: the Little Elephant" by Gary Boerckel, assistant professor of music, and Walter McIver, professor emeritus of music; the showing of the Walt Disney classic "101 Dalmatians," and Christmas carolling. Refreshments were served all afternoon. The party was held in Burchfield Lounge of the Wertz Student Center.

The annual Candlelight Worship Service, scheduled for 10 p.m. Dec. 16, was to include a "Christmas Oblation;" anthems by the college concert choir and two other student groups, the Folk Group Ensemble and Inner Strength; a sermon titled "The Gifts of Christmas" by the Rev. Dr. John W. Betlyon, campus minister; a Christmas prayer by Lycoming President Dr. Frederick E. Blumer, and carolling.

The New Mexican custom of filling paper bags with sand and placing a candle in each one as a luminaire also was to be observed again this year as part of the candlelight service. The flag court and south quadrangle area was to be decorated with the luminaires.

After the candlelight service, a reception was to be held in the chapel building's United Campus Ministry Center.

As it has for many years, the All-College Dinner was to be held in the dining hall of the Wertz Student Center. College employees, their families, and retirees were invited to attend the Dec. 19 dinner, as were the college's living group advisors (LGA's). Many of the LGA's were to be staying on campus that evening to help close the residence halls for the two-week Christmas vacation that began Dec. 19.

Dr. Robert W. Rabold, professor of economics, was to be honored at the dinner for his 25 years on the faculty. (He is the feature of this issue's Faculty Focus.) He was to receive a wristwatch with a seal of the college embossed on its face.

Phi Kappa Phi installs new members

Three seniors, a recent graduate, and a faculty member were initiated into the Lycoming chapter of Phi Kappa Phi national honor society Nov. 14.

Harold E. Bower, Jr., of Ogan Station, Kathryn S. Minick, of Newburg, and Dawn L. Dunbar, of Canton, the seniors, were joined by Nancy Onstead '80, of Old Tappan, N. J., and Dr. Ernest D. Giglio, an associate professor of political science, as the initiates.

Dr. Giglio also was the speaker for the event, which was held in the college's private dining room. He discussed "Education as Affirmation." (Excerpts from his talk are printed below.)

Bower is an accounting and business administration major; Minick is a psychology and mathematics major, and Dunbar is a mass communications major. Onstead graduated with a degree in medical technology.

To qualify for membership in Phi Kappa Phi, juniors must have a 3.85 grade point average and rank in the top three percent of their class; first-semester seniors must have a 3.75 grade point average and rank in the top six percent of their class, and second-semester seniors must have a 3.5 grade point average and rank in the top nine percent of their class.

Education as Affirmation

By Dr. Ernest D. Giglio

...I would like to share a few thoughts with you this evening on education as affirmation, drawing from the life of Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes.

Several years ago, my colleague, Dr. (Michael) Roskin, addressed the freshman convocation, imploring the students to pursue their studies with intensity. I second that exhortation, but would now ask students to think about the goals for this pursuit. Why are you here? Education for what purpose? Where are the sources of knowledge?

To the first question, I would retort: education for affirmation of life itself. To the second query, I would urge that the world be your laboratory. Thus, by recognizing the true purpose of education and the means to achieve it, your college years will prepare you for the varied roles society expects you to fulfill. Because while it is true that upon graduation you will enter a profession, it is also true that the roles of citizen, parent, and community leader are equally as important.

Oliver Wendell Holmes is my favorite Supreme Court Justice. His career exemplifies a very celebration of life. Soldier, author, poet, lawyer, judge, Supreme Court Justice for 30 years. His writings are still read by law students; his judicial opinions are considered classical pieces of literature. But it is his life that can serve as a model for us all, since it reflected the interdependence of formal learning with active and vigorous application of that knowledge to the real world.

In his book, The Common Law, Holmes proclaimed that "The life of the law has not been logic, it has been experience." In that one simple sentence Holmes destroyed the syllogism that law represents the result of a rational decision-making process. Holmes knew that lawyers could reach logical conclusions based on false premises; that judges could give any conclusion a logical form. But the law, Holmes argued, represented an accumulation of experience common to the people of a community. He knew that the common law—the law made by judges in an actual case—was shaped more by the customs and traditions of a culture, by the prevalent moral and political theories, and even by the prevailing prejudices and intuitions than by any set of judicial principles.

...Not too long ago the President of Haverford College took a sabbatical leave from his position. During that year, he held a variety of jobs—from dishwasher to trash collector—so that, as he put it, he could learn about the real world. And just last year, when Harvard University was creating a rationale for its new core curriculum, the task force listed the objectives of that new curriculum: (1) the need for students to possess sound communicative skills; (2) the importance of students to master concepts and methodologies from the humanistic and scientific disciplines; and (3) the development of moral and ethical values. The Task Force Report went on to state that in the last third of the 20th century: "A crucial difference between the educated and the uneducated is the extent to which one's life experience is viewed in wider contexts."

Experience again! Does this mean that we are to forego traditional classroom learning? Of course not! What the above are telling us is that learning does not take place in a vacuum—in the sealed confines of the classroom.

We are urged to take advantage of all learning opportunities regardless of how informal and unstructured they may be and to integrate these bits and pieces of fragmented knowledge into a framework of reference, a set of principles which we can rely upon and apply to our lives. In this sense learning is a process; a continuum which is constantly being replenished, enriched, and changed, not only by our formal training but, perhaps, altered in more significant ways by our daily experiences...

The educated person views life's experiences in a wider context. The educated person is not simply a professional careerist, but an active and concerned citizen, a loving and caring parent, a leader in the community. We who represent the present rely upon you, who represent the future, to carry on the vital traditions of our civilization.

"The earth belongs to the living," Jefferson wrote, and we who will soon be the past transmit it on to you... For who else will save our libraries from the censors and from those who measure the value of an idea only by what it profits in the marketplace? Who else will support our symphonies and our museums against those who would reduce us to the pap of commercial television? Who else will inject humanity into an economic system that so often appears heartless and indifferent? Who else will insist upon political integrity in our governmental systems against those who argue that corruption and the abuse of power represents "politics as usual?"

The stakes are high; the burden heavy...Remember: the educated person is not a bystander, but a participant. On the occasion of his 90th birthday, Justice Holmes was asked to address the nation on radio. Although tired and ailing, his message to the country was one of hope and not despair.

If Holmes were here tonight, he would exhort you to let life be your teacher, to bring to your work a mighty heart. To live a life of passion and action. Heed these words so that when death comes and plucks at your ear, you too can echo with Holmes, "that life has been worth the living."

Directory publisher plans phone follow-up

Beginning in February, Bernard C. Harris Publishing Company, Inc., will conduct telephone follow-ups to all alumni to verify the information to be printed in the directory tentatively slated for release in late spring. At the same time, telephone representatives will invite alumni to order copies of the volume and purchase advertising space.

The telephone call is a follow-up to the two questionnaires mailed to all alumni with verified addresses. If you have not received your questionnaire, please contact the alumni office immediately.

Since the cost of the directory is self-liquidating through sales and advertising, these requests are made by the Harris Company with complete approval.

These procedures enable the alumni office to make the book available to alumni at no cost or obligation to the college and, as a by-product, the Harris Company provides us with completely updated alumni records.

The directory will provide a complete listing of all living alumni with current addresses, including a biographical sketch on each alumnus with name, class, degree(s), residence address and phone number, and business or professional information where available. It also will contain a section of material on the history of Lycoming and alumni notes of interest.

Christmas (Continued)

The dinner also was to include carolling and other musical entertainment.

The live Christmas special on TV was to be held Dec. 14 from 4 to 5 p.m. Billed as a "Family Holiday Special" by WEEF, it was to be one of four musical specials broadcast live by the station on the four Advent Sunday afternoons at four different locations.

The TV station was to supply an emcee and the production equipment and technical support; Lycoming's public relations and student services offices were to coordinate and line up musical groups and performers for "the special."

Although most of the one-hour special was to be filmed live, segments were to be pre-recorded during the six days preceding the event. These segments were to include the Christmas sights and sounds of Greater Williamsport and Lycoming College.

Faculty focus: Robert W. Rabold

"There's no simple answer" to America's economic woes, and don't expect any sweeping changes in the country's economic performance under Ronald Reagan.

So says Dr. Robert W. Rabold, professor of economics and Lycoming College's third-ranking full-time faculty member in length of service. He was to be honored at the All-College Christmas Dinner Dec. 19 for completing 25 years on the faculty.

Although Rabold admits he is skeptical about the possibility of general economic improvement under the president-elect's policies, the economist believes there is more hope for a rebounding U.S. economy with Reagan in office than with Jimmy Carter. In contrasting the two leaders, Rabold says he believes the former California governor will surround himself with more competent advisors than the President has.

Reagan "will organize, deputize, and supervise" and make broad decisions based on the findings of his advisors, according to Rabold. President Carter, on the other hand, tends to become mired in details, the professor said, and, thus, "can't see the forest for the trees."

Yet if Reagan is to have any measurable success with his plans for cutting taxes and reducing federal programs, trimmings and eliminations will have to be made without giving favor to vested interests. Rabold doubts this can be carried out.

America's foremost economic problem is inflation, Rabold says, and "unless the rate goes way down," no economic package can work favorably. Double-digit inflation in the Western world is caused, roughly, by a combination of increasing affluence and decreasing per capita productivity.

When asked to state what impact the present ill health of the economy has on Lycoming's enrollment, Dr. Rabold said: "I don't think anybody knows." The two arguments cited most often, he said, are offsetting. One opinion is that fewer people are entering private colleges when money is tight because of higher costs; the other is that more local people are selecting Lycoming because it costs less to attend a college near home.

The chairman of the two-member economics department said if he wasn't teaching, he probably would be a corporate economist engaged in economic research. One reason he favors a career in education is because "I don't want to punch time clocks."

The Pittsburgh native received his bachelor's degree from The Pennsylvania State University and his master's and doctor's degrees from the University of Pittsburgh. After a brief stay on the Pitt faculty, Rabold moved to Lycoming in 1955.

Rabold is an avid hunter and fisherman in his spare time. He and his wife, Hedy, are the parents of four children. They live in Williamsport.

Concert combines choirs, community

Lycoming's Clarke Chapel was filled with the sound of choral music Nov. 16 as it never had been performed before at the college.

On that evening, the college choir joined with the Williamsport Area High School choir, area instrumentalists, and members of the Susquehanna Valley Symphony Orchestra to perform two major works: Leonard Bernstein's "Chichester Psalms" and George Frederic Handel's "Coronation Anthem No. 4."

More than 200 performers participated in the first concert of its type ever presented in Greater Williamsport, with 170 voices making up the combined choirs.

The concert was directed by Dr.

Fred M. Thayer, an assistant professor of music and choir director at Lycoming, and Thomas Gallup, a choral music director at the high school.

The performance featured a solo by Gary Brubaker, Jr., a Williamsport ninth-grader, who has sung with the well-known American Boychoir formerly known as the Columbus Boychoir. The 14-year-old sang a movement from Bernstein's work.

Dr. Thayer said the concert was the first cooperative community event combining the college and high school choirs. It is expected to become an annual affair.

The director added that all participants, including the Susquehanna Valley orchestra members, volunteered their talents. There was no admission charge. The concert was performed on a nonprofit basis.

"Chichester Psalms" was written in 1965 for the annual music festival of the Chichester, Winchester, and Salisbury cathedrals in England. "Coronation Anthem No. 4, also titled "Let Thy Hand Be Strengthened," was one of four anthems written for the coronation of King George II and Queen Caroline of England in 1727. One or more of the anthems has been performed at every British coronation since that year.

College fund: Giving trails 1979 pace

By George P. Flint
Director of Institutional Relations

Your gift is needed NOW for the Lycoming College Fund. In the past, Lycoming's loyal supporters have given for the best of reasons, including scholarships, faculty salaries, and general support where it is needed most. Those needs have all increased due to inflation, rising costs of energy, and other increased costs. If you gave $100 in 1970, it would take a gift of $200 to contribute the same amount of buying power in 1980.

As of December 1, 1980, we have received $19,608 compared to $21,035 on December 1, 1979, so we are behind last year's giving to the Lycoming College Fund. Help us catch up in December and January. Our goal is $150,000.

Make out your check to "Lycoming College" and mail it today. Checks dated in December, 1980, are deductible on your 1980 tax returns. Checks dated January 1, 1981, or after may be deducted from 1981 tax returns. Alumni should send gifts to the Alumni Office; non-alumni friends, parents, and corporations should send gifts to the Development Office, Lycoming College, Williamsport, Pa. 17701.

(Class of '70 'ooters' continued next issue)

Undefeated swimmers surprise of young winter season

The Physical Education and Recreation Center's pool has been a scene of unprecedented Lycomania so far this season.

The reason: coach Dave Hair's youthful swimming team is off to its best start in years, and the crowds—large and enthusiastic—are loving it.

Wins have been notched over Elizabethtown (77-25), East Stroudsburg State (72-41) and Dickinson (55-49). Hair called the victory over traditionally rugged Dickinson "the biggest win ever" for Lycoming swimming.

Carrying the load for Hair are a group of freshmen who have already set eight school records. Distance freestyle Steve Newman (Rye, N. Y.) has lowered marks in the 200-, 500-, and 1,000-yard events. Ed Cianfaro (Glen Riddle), the team's most versatile performer, has set records in the 200 individual medley and 200 butterfly. Cianfaro joins Tom Holleran (South Orange, N. J.), Kurt Schussmann (Stanhope, N. J.) and female sensation Denise Zimmernan (Reinholds) on the record-setting 400 medley relay unit. Ken Sholder (Williamsport) has a record in the 100 freestyle. The team of Sholder, Karl Disney (Philadelphia), Jack Morrone (Easton), and Holleran share a new standard in the 400 freestyle relay.

Basketball: 2-2

Stingy defense has placed coach Dutch Burch's cagers among the national leaders for fewest points allowed. But a hitherto untracked offense has offset its defensive advantages and left the Warriors with an early 2-2 record, 2-1 in the Middle Atlantic Conference Northern Division.

Wins have been recorded over Juniata (60-48) and King's (55-49); losses have been dealt by Lock Haven State (61-55) and Wilkes (55-53).

Junior 6-8 center Earl Ostrander (Wildwood, N. J.), usually known as a defensive specialist, has been a pleasant offensive surprise, scoring a squad-leading 11.3 points per game. His rebounding average of 8.5 a contest also led the Warriors. Senior 5-10 captain Mark Dugan (Philadelphia) was averaging a team-leading 4.8 assists a game.

Lycoming, traditionally a good foul shooting team, has converted 68 percent of its free throws. In the field goal department, however, the Warriors were being hurt by their 40 percent rate.

The team's remaining December schedule listed four non-league games, including two at the Mount St. Mary's (Md) Christmas Classic. Conference play resumes at Susquehanna Jan. 7.

Women's basketball: 0-1

Ice cold shooting doomed the women's basketball team in its opener as the Warriors fell to Wilkes, 71-54.

Senior 5-3 guard Terry Rhian (Montoursville), an all-Middle Atlantic Conference selection last year, sparked the Warriors with 19 points. Reserve forward Ann Taggart (Bloomingdale, N. J.), a 5-8 freshman making her collegiate debut, added 12 points and eight rebounds.

Lycoming, in its third varsity season, appears to have a well-balanced squad but lacks depth; only eight women are playing.

Still, coach Deb Holmes is confident the team can improve upon last winter's 4-9 finish.

Wrestling: 1-3

After crushing King's (38-0) in the season-opener, coach Budd Whitehill's wrestlers fell to Princeton (21-17), Army (25-23), and West Chester State (28-12) in a quadrangular meet in New Jersey.

Top performers through the early part of the season have been Marc Springman (heavyweight, Williamsport), Rick Umstead (150, Unityville) and John Russo (126, Jersey Shore). Springman won his first two matches, including a pin in the Army match; Umstead and Russo compiled 3-1 records.

Whitehill's 31-man roster includes six former Middle Atlantic Conference placemen and several freshmen with outstanding high school backgrounds.

The Warriors, facing a formidable schedule of Division I and II opponents, hope to improve on last year's 9-8-1 showing.

Football: Warriors finish 9-1 season; nine chosen all-stars

It was Lycomania from the opening kickoff in September to the final gun in November.

In completing its most successful season ever on the gridiron, the Lycoming College football team (9-1) set a spate of college records and strengthened its reputation as an Eastern small-college football power with a fifth-place finish (its highest ever) in the voting for the Lambert Bowl.

Ironically, however, the 1980 Warriors' accomplishments were bitter-sweet. Lycoming did not win a third consecutive Middle Atlantic Conference Northern Division championship; the Warriors surrendered their crown to Delaware Valley, which handed the blue and gold its only defeat, a 9-0 Parents' Weekend shocker. And, the loss spoiled the team's hopes for a berth in the NCAA post-season playoffs.

In spite of these disappointments, Girardi said: "We aren't going to let the fact that we didn't win our league or get a playoff bid detract from our enjoyment of the best season in Lycoming College history."

Since Lycoming began winning consistently in 1975, the Warriors' defense has led the way. This was true again in 1980, although the offense, for the first time, made inroads into the national statistics picture. Unofficially, Lycoming finished third (249 yards per game) in passing among the nation's Division III teams. Individually, All-American candidate quarterback Rick Burd (Lock Haven) was Division III's third most efficient passer. The senior, considered by many to be the premier small college quarterback in the East, threw for 2,218 yards and 17 touchdowns, and completed 56 percent of 250 air attempts.

Several other players also enjoyed great seasons. In fact, nine of 22 positions of the MAC-North all-star team were filled by Warriors.

All-league players were Burd and linebackers Ron Hoover (Snow Shoe) and Bob Sinnott (Lansdale), all seniors; tight end Mike Burd (Lock Haven), defensive end Mickey Pease (Philadelphia), and safety Dave Nolan (Norristown), all juniors; defensive tackle Doug Schonewolf (Tyrone), offensive tackle Joe Bours (Norristown), and wide receiver Jeff Wert (Stroudsburg), sophomores. Rick Burd and Hoover were named to the star squad for the third straight year.

In addition, junior defensive end Chuck Hoover (Snow Shoe) and freshman placekicker Lance Spitler (Montoursville) received honorable mention recognition.

There were other honors. The Burds and Sinnott made the Eastern Collegiate Athletic Conference Southern Region team. Senior safety Fran Harvey (Norristown), a two-time MAC-North selection, earned an ECAC honorable mention citation.

A potpourri of 30 records—team, season, individual or career—were tied or broken in 1980. Rick Burd, for one, now owns every Lycoming passing standard. Accordingly, his prime targets, brother Mike and Wert, hold most receiving marks. After only one season, soccer-style booter Spitler already has the most field goal and extra-point records. And although Lycoming was generally thought of as a throwing team this past autumn, sophomore tailback Mike Santoleri (Berwyn) rushed for a college-record eight TDs.
